HOME TREATMENT FOR WOMEN
The remarkable success of Dr. Voke's Home Treatment for Women is attested to by hundreds of satisfied patients. It saves many suffering women from dangerous operations. Astonishing results. Many cases pronounced hopeless have yielded readily. Women suffering from any disease or weakness peculiar to their sex are invited to call or write.

MEN
Dr. Voke wants a private, heart-to-heart talk with every man who is weak, nervous, broken down, discouraged, or suffering from any disease caused by ignorance, excess, contagion, incompetent treatment or neglect. Success or failure in life depends on your physical and mental condition. Do not put off a matter of such vital importance. Do something now. Write today if you cannot call. Everything confidential. Consultation and advice free.

WHY CONSULT DR. VOKE?
He has made regular visits to this community for nearly fifteen years and has established a permanent practice and reputation.

His practice is limited to Chronic Diseases, and he has spent practically all his life in the study and treatment of them.

His Specialty:—To devise and furnish at a low cost successful courses of home treatment for those who have no time or money to spend at expensive hospitals and sanitariums.

He is in the prime of life (forty-three) and at his very best for good work.

His practice consists of many of rare and difficult cases having failed to secure satisfaction elsewhere.

At least three-fourths of his patients are sent to him by former patients.

If he thinks he cannot help you, he will say so. Dr. Voke's best reference is the testimony of his former patients, the result of fifteen years practice in this community.

REMEMBER
That Dr. Voke invites searching investigation of his work and methods. And that he charges absolutely nothing for consultation and examination. Your case will receive his best attention. Everything confidential.

About a hundred and twenty-five members of the Ringier family gathered at the home of Michel Ringier, two miles east of Waldo, yesterday for their annual reunion. Hamper containing delicacies of every description were provided by those present and at noon an elegant picnic dinner was served on the lawn. During the afternoon hours an informal program of music and recitations was rendered.

accused man, was called.
What Douglass Says.
Douglass described the household, declaring that his cousin and two aunts lived there with his father, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., and his wife and himself.

"What were the relations between Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., and his wife?"
"They were both apparently happy," said the witness. "They usually kissed when they met or parted."
"Did you ever see any lack of harmony between them?"
"Never."

"Now, the night of the murder, what was your first intimation of the tragedy?"
"I received a telephone call from Dr. Mercer at the Owen home. My father, sister and I went to the Owen house. We had a bottle of whisky. When we got there, father went in first. I saw Henry in my father's arms, sobbing and fondling the little sliver. It was one of Louise's shoes I knew then that Louise was dead. I couldn't stand it any longer, so I went out."

Douglass told of smearing his clothes with blood in driving the blood-soaked automobile the night of the crime. He described the blood stains in the bar. He told of driving the car from the time Henry brought his wife's body until 6 o'clock the next afternoon. The roads were dry and dusty, he said.

Experts Examine Automobile.
At this point Smith interrupted to ask permission to have experts examine the automobile. The defense evidently expected to make a great effort to show that the blood stains in the Midlothian turnpike might have leaked through the car.
W. F. Gordon and Carroll Montague were given permission to look over the car in the presence of an officer. Here a mysterious message caused a delay.

Rising, Smith declared that he had just received a message conveying information of great importance.
"I will have to go to the telephone," he said. "We may have to call another witness."

A movement of surprise and expectancy swept the court-room as Smith worked his way out to a telephone.
While Smith was at the telephone, Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., visibly affected, talked in excited whispers with his father. He grasped the old man by the arm and read the message to him with eyes ablaze with excitement. Hill Carter declared that he could make public no intimation of the new discovery at this time. "It is of intense importance," he declared, "and we are doing our best to verify it. But to even intimate its purpose now might hurt our case."

Meantime, the court-room sat tense with expectancy.
After nearly an hour of bustling about, Smith returned to the court-house.
"I haven't been able to complete my investigation," he said. "I was unable to obtain any satisfaction over the telephone so I have sent a telegram."

The direct examination of Douglass Beattie was then resumed.
Douglass told of various trips to the scene of the crime in the Beattie automobile after the tragedy.

J. C. Talley was called after the character witnesses had been quickly disposed of. He was questioned as to conversations in which he was alleged to have declared that he was asleep at the time of the tragedy. On the stand Talley reiterated that he heard a woman's scream on the night of the murder.

Thereupon, F. E. Lutz was called. He said that on the morning after the killing he had talked with Talley and Talley had told him that he knew nothing about the crime because he was asleep at the time.

During the recess H. M. Smith, chief counsel for the defense, declared that his client would take the stand at the opening of the court today.
"We have witnesses who will occupy the remainder of today's session and will put Mr. Beattie on the first thing in the morning."

Story Impounded.
Before Wendenburg got through with the boy, his entire story had been impeached. He told the story of the purchase as occurring on three different days.

While Wendenburg pounded the boy, Henry Beattie, Jr., sat with bowed head resting on his folded arms on the desk before him. The prisoner has totally lost the defendant's demeanor since he marked his appearance at the early days of the trial. The heavy circles beneath his eyes grow steadily darker, the convulsive working of his nervous jaw muscles becomes more apparent. His whole appearance has changed.

Job Weinstein, the fourteen-year-old brother of David Weinstein, was next called. He corroborated his brother's testimony regarding Paul's familiarity with the pawnshop. The boy differed from his brother and agreed with Paul on several points of the story of the purchase of the gun, but he contradicted Paul's statement that the boy took the gun apart and wrapped it up. The little fellow demonstrated before the jury that he was unable to take the gun apart.

WOMEN ACTIVE IN REGISTRATION

Many Will Vote For Members of School Board.

The third day of registrations conducted by the board of election proved to be rather busy. Clarke and registrars handled a steady stream of people between the hours of 8 a. m. and 2 p. m. this afternoon. The offices will also be open this evening between 4 and 9 a. m. Many of those who registered today were women who have taken an exceedingly great interest in the matter of electing a school board this fall. The last day of registration is tomorrow. The hours are the same as today—from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m. and from 4 to 9 p. m.

Report Discounted.

New York, Sept. 1.—The cotton exchange failed to take at its face value the government cotton report today and instead of the jump of fifty to 100 points which ordinarily would have followed a report of this character, prices were boosted only twenty to fourteen points. The idea had spread so consistently that the south in pursuance with its thirteen cent cotton cry, would put out bullish figures that the report failed to make any impression on the local exchange.

Outside, however, the report was taken to be authentic and a flood of buying orders sent the price up to twenty-five to thirty-five points advance with all of the big traders, combatting the upward movement.

Death Message Received.
Mr. James Ullom of East Church street received word this morning of the death of his uncle, James Ullom of Cincinnati, who passed away at his home yesterday.

The message did not state the time nor the cause of death. Funeral services will be held at Mt. Gilead tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock. Interment will be made in the Mt. Gilead cemetery.

The Cotton Crop.

Washington, Sept. 1.—A special cotton crop report issued today by the department of agriculture estimated that on August 25 the condition of the crop was 73.2 per cent. of a normal, as compared with 83.1 on July 25, 1911; 72.1 on August 25, 1910, 73.5 the ten year average on August 25.
